

Portraiture

- A portrait is a painting, photograph, sculpture, or other artistic representation of a person, in which the face and its expression is predominant.

- The intent is to display the likeness, personality, and even the mood of the person.

- A portrait often shows a person looking directly at the painter or photographer, in order to most successfully engage the subject with the viewer.

History of Portraiture

Funeral/Mummy Portraits

- A panel painting of the deceased that covered the faces of Egyptian mummies in their graves

Paintings were created with Encaustic (bees wax)

or

Tempera (egg paint)
on wooden panels

- Created from the 1st century BC to the mid 3rd century AD

- About 900 mummy portraits are known at present. The majority were found in the necropoleis of Faiyum.

- Due to the hot dry Egyptian climate, the paintings are frequently very well preserved, often retaining their brilliant colours seemingly unfaded by time.

Greek Sculptures

- Portraits made to flatter and idealize the male figure

Kouros 530 BC

- Women were seen as less important, and therefore less focus was on the body, but was given to the clothing/drapery

Middle Ages

- With the coming of the Dark Ages after the sack of Rome (c.450 CE), public art took a less conspicuous form.
- Portraiture as well as other types of paintings were created mainly for the insides of churches and monasteries
- The sole major patron of the arts for most of the Medieval era was the Church.

- Portraits were typically in the form of
  - fresco murals (pigment mixed with water of room temperature on a thin layer of wet, fresh plaster)
  - encaustic panel paintings,
  - or used to illustrate illuminated gospel manuscripts, like the Book of Kells (c.800).

- The Byzantine style of portrait painting which dominated throughout the period 450-1400, was not compatible with true-life pictures. Instead, painters adhered to an hieratic (hieroglyphs) style of art, in which the spiritual and human characteristics of a figure were to be inferred from symbolic motifs.

Mount Sinai, Throned Madonna with Child (c.600 AD)

St. John from the Gospel Book of Charlemagne (Coronation Gospels), c. 800-810

- During the Romanesque and Gothic periods to the fourteenth century (c.1000-1300), portraiture widened to include stained glass art

The image is a screenshot of a computer screen displaying a PowerPoint presentation. The window title is "ScreenCast-O-Matic" and the file name is "Portraiture.pptx". The presentation is in "Slide Show" mode. The main slide features a large image of the Mona Lisa on the left and the word "Portraiture" in white text on a black background on the right. A vertical slide navigation pane on the left shows six thumbnails of different Renaissance portraits. The bottom right corner of the screen shows a video inset of a woman with short brown hair, wearing a red top, who appears to be presenting. The system tray at the top shows the time as "Thu 11:58 AM" and 100% battery. A "Click to add notes" area is visible at the bottom of the slide.

Time Laps Portrait Painting

- Oil paint
- slow-drying paint that consists of particles of pigment suspended in a drying oil, commonly linseed oil.
- The viscosity of the paint may be modified by the addition of a solvent such as turpentine or white spirit,
- varnish may be added to increase the glossiness of the dried oil paint film.
- Oil paints have been used in Europe since the 12th century for simple decoration, but were not widely adopted as an artistic medium until the early 15th century.

The logo for Antiquity.tv is centered on a black background. It features a large, ornate, golden-brown initial letter 'A' with intricate flourishes. To the right of the 'A', the word 'ntiquity.tv' is written in a matching golden-brown, elegant cursive script. Below the text, there is a vertical, glowing blue and white nebula-like effect, resembling a comet tail or a starburst, which adds a dynamic and ethereal quality to the design.
